Spying Science

The NBC special, "The Science of Spying," May 4, exposure of some of the workings and the thinkings of the CIA should be applauded and encouraged by citizens interested in a national policy of a constructive nature.

News reporting of confused thinking of individuals in the field are placed in perspective by the exposure of confused thinking admitted by individuals who help formulate policies of the CIA and the government of the United States.

An individual who viewed "The Science of Spying" would appreciate more fully the news item, "Marine Kind of Sorry for Killing 1st Cong" (Evening Bulletin April 30).

After it was reported that U.S. Marine Cpl. David had shot in the back his first Vietnamese in Viet Nam, a Marine sergeant said, "This is a tough war, but don't think that we are killers. We are Marines."

"I let him get 250 yards away and then dropped him with two shots from my M-1," said David. "I felt kind of sorry for him as I stood there. And he didn't even have a weapon," he added. (End of news item).

I have a feeling of sorrow for the death of the Vietnamese, for the plight of Cpl. David, for the present policy of the nation, and for the thinking of citizens that evolved these sad events.
